On the afternoon of November 24, the College of International Exchange organized a visit to the Xinhai Revolutionary Museum to remember the martyrs of the revolution and build up patriotic feelings.

The Xinhai Revolutionary Museum is a flat "V"-shaped symbol of victory, upward pointing, implying the courage to go forward, enterprising. The whole building is a blend of traditional Chinese architecture and modern methods, celebrating the spirit of pioneering of Shouyi War.

Stepping into the museum, along the footsteps of history, the students visited the five exhibition halls of "the old site of restoration display of the Ejun Dudu", "for the world to be the first one of the Xinhai Revolution Wuchang Uprising Historical Exhibition", "the foundation of the Republic of the Xinhai Revolution Historical Exhibition", "Red Building Bird's-eye View - celebrities to stay in the trail" and "the history of the language Council in Hubei Display", in which the students of the College carried on a time and space dialogue, learned about the history of the Chinese Revolution, the hardship of the revolution, and know the hard-won happiness of life nowadays.

A century of greatness, the vicissitudes of life, the Chinese nation has accomplished a country from decay to a powerful and developed growth miracle in the midst of repeated failures. The spirit of the great Xinhai Revolution has inspired generations of Chinese children, and when we look back at history today, we sincerely marvel at the bravery and tenacity of the revolutionary leaders of that year, and admire their courage in sacrificing their lives for the sake of the country, regardless of life and death. We should remember the tribulations and humiliations they suffered, and cherish the happiness and peace they achieved with their blood and sweat.

The students were overwhelmed with emotion after the visit. A hundred years ago, the revolutionary martyrs stepped forward, throwing their heads and spilling their blood for the liberation of the people and the prosperity of the country. A hundred years later, our generation of young people should learn from history, inherit the glorious tradition and revolutionary spirit of our forefathers, turn the infinite love for the motherland into a great motivation to study hard, and take up the responsibilities and missions entrusted to us by the times.
